Amend Senate bill No. 1, Section 6a, by striking out all after the word "oil," in line 35, page 7, of the printed bill.

"And it is made the duty of the Railroad Commission to meet every thirty days to canvass the market demands for crude petroleum oil and natural gas in each area of the common source of supply and allocate to the proposed purchasers in that area ratably the allowable production for that area for the ensuing thirty days, and shall give preference in allotment of allowable production to those offering the maximum price for that allowable which the owners are willing to sell at the price offered.

"The would-be purchasers shall make written demand for the amount of such commodities they desire for the ensuing thirty days and at the price which they will pay for them, at their source of supply; and these written demands shall be filed with, and shall be received by, the Railroad Commission at least ten days before the day of canvassing the list of demands.

"In no event shall the Railroad Commission consider the amount of importations of foreign crude petroleum oil and its refined products into the United States in considering 'reasonable market demand.'"

Mr. Wagstaff moved to table the amendment.

Mr. Kayton moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed, and to table the motion to reconsider.

The motion to table prevailed.

REASONS FOR VOTES ON SENATE BILL NO. 1.

We regard Senate bill No. 1 as being fundamentally wrong. We think that all price-fixing legislation is wrong in principle and contrary to good government. We have therefore consistently opposed the progress of House bill No. 3, a similar bill to Senate bill No. 1. A majority of our colleagues have seen fit to differ from us in this view and have passed the bill to take effect in ninety days from final passage. In order that its effects for good or evil may be more quickly determined, we have joined them in an emergency vote so the bill may take immediate effect.

HOLLOWAY, ADKINS.

I vote for this bill; first, because the session was called for the specific purpose of curing an existing evil which, if continued, would dissipate one of our greatest natural resources, one in which the people have a vested right; second, I voted for the bill for the purpose of making it effective immediately.

I believe it wrong to regulate business by governmental interference, but being an emergency I yield my position.

I believe it will be held void by the courts.

SHERRILL.

I voted "yea" on Senate bill No. 1 but believe that it is fundamentally unsound and against the principles of government. I am voting for it as an emergency only.

ADAMS of Jasper.

I am voting "nay" on Senate bill No. 1 because it places in the Railroad Commission of Texas legislative powers denied under the Constitution, and expressly reserved to the legislative branch of government, and because it is in direct conflict with the principles of the Democratic party, and overwhelmingly endorsed by the sovereign vote of the people of the United States in that it allows the State of Texas, acting under the guise of police power, to create a monopoly in the production and marketing of crude petroleum and its products, and for the further reason that it violates long-established laws of property rights.

LASSETER.

I vote "yea" on the final passage of Senate bill No. 1 because I consider it an emergency only and not as a fundamental principle of government.

VAN ZANDT.

I vote "yea" on Senate bill No. 1 because it was the best we can do. Although I believe we have added another burden upon the Commission. That it will not give relief sought, but will invite many suits.

HANSON.

I vote "yea" on Senate bill No. 1 because it has been shown that it will be enacted into law by the vote of the House on engrossment of this bill. I am voting "yea" in order to place this law into immediate effect so we may be able to deal with this proposition in the Regular Session of the Forty-third Legislature.

I believe it is fundamentally wrong, but under existing circumstances I vote "yea."

SULLIVANT.

I am fundamentally opposed to the principle of government incorporated in this bill, but I feel that if it is to pass it should be put into immediate effect, in order that its operation may be watched between now and the Regular Session of the Forty-third Legislature, and for that reason I vote "yea," but do so with a feeling that a dangerous precedent is being set for future legislation.

FERGUSON.

Reason for voting "yea" on Senate bill No. 1. Records will bear me out that I am opposed to the bill for the following reason: I don't believe that we should have high-price gasoline and cheap cotton. The records of other members of the House show by their vote that the bill will pass; therefore, I am voting "yea" to give the bill 100 votes so it goes into effect at once and give the law a fair trial. If it proves bad law, the Forty-third Legislature can repeal it. If it is a good law, it should be in effect at once and at all times. If we were receiving reasonable price for cotton and other farm products, it sometimes appears to me that I should be wholehearted for the bill because the oil industry pays over fifty per cent of all taxes towards maintaining the State government (this includes our public schools). If this revenue is lost it has to be replaced through some other source, and I certainly would not want it placed on our farms and homes.

HERZIK.

I voted "nay" on House bill No. 3 on last Thursday, which is substantially the same as Senate bill No. 1.

While opposed to the passage of Senate bill No. 1, there is a sufficient number of favorable votes to assure its passage and I voted "yea" to assist in obtaining a sufficient number of votes to make the law effective immediately.

BEDFORD.

I vote "yea" on Senate bill No. 1 for the sole purpose of suspending the rule and allowing the bill to go into immediate effect, as it would be of no avail to not permit the measure to become effective until ninety days from this date. I have voted consistently against this character of legislation and shall continue to oppose this legislation whenever I am called upon to vote upon its merits as a member of the next Legislature.

BARRON.

I consider Senate bill No. 1 unsound, unwise and repugnant to the fundamental principles of government, but, as I cannot prevent its passage, and believing it will do less harm for it to go into immediate effect than to wait ninety days, I cease my opposition and vote "yea" to give it the necessary majority.

BRYANT.

I vote "yea" on final passage of Senate bill No. 1 for the sole reason of giving it immediate effect, and am unalterably opposed to this bill in principle.

DANIEL.

I vote for final passage of Senate bill No. 1, the bill to regulate and control the production of crude petroleum.

I opposed the House bill on this subject, but it passed the House by a big majority, and would become the law in ninety days without my vote, so I am voting to put this bill into immediate effect, so that the courts may declare it unconstitutional at the earliest possible date.

If it proves unsatisfactory, the next Legislature can repeal it, and save the people the increased cost of gasoline.

TERRELL of Cherokee.

I am voting "nay" upon Senate bill No. 1 for various reasons. In the beginning I was hopeful that a session of the Legislature would not be called affecting the control of the prices of any commodity by process of law. If this can be done for oil, it can be done for many other merchantable commodities produced and used by the consuming public. The anti-trust laws of our State have been effective in preventing the stronger powers combining to become usurpers, embezzlers of power and oppressors of the weak. The "oil bills" now being put into law in Texas may relieve the powers that be from restriction against combination to control prices and not only allow them to do so under the law but require them, in compliance with such law, to agreed prices, thus ending competition in trade.

I believe that if oil is to be taken at a fixed price on market demand, it will be within the power of those buying to determine the market demand and the price, according to law. I believe that so long as Texas oil is to be purchased according to demand, and that so long as foreign oil can be imported cheaper than it can be produced at home, that there will then be no demand for our home production. I represent an oil district where the wells have dwindled to small output and a long distance across the State from the largest oil field in the world. In my opinion, if oil is to be taken according to demand, the amount desired may be obtained in a small area where this heavy production exists and the people in my district may be thereby deprived of a market for their oil. It is not my conception that the three-judge court has held our pro-ration statute void, but that this court only held that the order of the Railroad Commission was based upon economic waste, not provided in the Texas statutes, instead of upon physical waste, which was so provided. That our statute passed in 1931 is yet valid, is enforceable and was satisfactory to all parties interested at the time it was passed, and that it is a better law for the public welfare than the statute now being adopted. While the law passed at this session might be of aid to the major companies and some of the independents, I believe it will be harmful to the people at large, because I believe that if those companies who purchase the raw product are permitted to control the price of oil on market demand, that under the same statute they will be given the right to control the prices on the manufactured article to be purchased by the public through the filling stations.

I think the bill is adverse to our anti-trust laws and that it will render asunder the suit now being prosecuted by the Attorney General's Department against the major oil companies for violation of the anti-trust law. I believe that the demand for oil will be greatly lessened under the bill being passed at this session and be dangerous to the producers and landowners in Texas so long as foreign oils are permitted to be imported.

Though disagreeing with some of my good friends, I believe that to place this control into the hands of purchasers of oil to determine the amount to be taken and the price to be paid therefor will greatly reduce the gross production tax and therefore work great injury to the school children of our State. I believe that it is only a matter of a short time until the error in these bills will be discovered and that the Forty-third Legislature, which shall convene in January, will be called upon by those parties now sponsoring and advocating these measures to materially modify, or to change, or to, perhaps, repeal the measure.

CUNNINGHAM.

I voted against Senate bill No. 1, for the reason, in the first place, it is unconstitutional in many of its parts. It has been offered as a bill for the conservation of the natural resources of oil and gas, and yet the majority of this House refused to put on the amendment that I offered to really conserve these resources. It was the Indiana statute enacted thirty-nine years ago, which required producers to keep their wells under control until a market was found for the oil and gas coming from the wells.

In the East Texas fields at the present time, more than $75,000 worth of gas and gasoline daily is burned up in the fields in order to get forty barrels of oil out of each well. My amendment would have stopped this until pipes could be laid to the cities and towns of Texas to carry this gas in order to compete with the Lone Star Gas Company monopoly in towns and cities.

The gasoline could be saved by the erection of casinghead gasoline plants, and these would be erected, if the State would ever establish a really conservative policy.

Again, this House refused to adopt Section 5 of the Oklahoma statute to provide for the gauging of these wells upon a scientific basis, that they might provide for the equitable taking of the products of the wells in accordance with relative value. As it is now, forty barrels are allowed to be taken from a well with only a two-foot sand, while the well with an eighty-foot sand cannot take any more. This is the taking of one's property and giving it to another without compensation; and again, a man with fifty acres and only one well can get but forty barrels, while the man with ten wells on fifty acres is getting four hundred barrels a day regardless of the thickness of the oil sand.

Again, this House failed to define "common source of supply," "economic waste," "allowable production," and "reasonable market demand"; these ought to have been defined by this Legislature in order that the law may be made certain and definite.

Again, it is a hypocritical way in which to try to raise the price of a commodity, when the labor of our masses and the products of farm and ranch are at a greatly depressed value.

This bill, if it becomes a law, will not stand up in the courts and its supporters will be disappointed, even as the supporters of the "Cotton Bill," which is now in "Limbo." For these and many other reasons I have voted against this bill, knowing full well that it will place the control of the oil and gas business in the hands of the mighty, and the masses will have to pay more for their oil and gasoline. I most vehemently and earnestly protest against its passage. It is unconstitutional. With Cassandra I say, "Thou wilt see, and say in truth, his tale was true." But I will not be here to say, "I told you so!"

FARMER.
